- Narrator: Tiger Moth, Insect Ninja, defender of truth and justice — especially in the Fourth Grade. Today's tale is an encounter between Tiger Moth and the forces of greed and evil.
- Tiger Moth: One of my most dangerous encounters with greed yet. Outside of school lunchtime, that is.
- Narrator: At Antennae Elementary School, Mrs. Mandible's class has just received a surprise visitor, Principal Pincers.
- Principal Pincers: Good Morning, Class. This week, bugs and girls, we will celebrate the Chinese New Year.
- Kung Pow: But this is February!
- Narrator: Tiger's assistant, Kung Pow, is not always the sharpest bug under the rock.
- Principal Pincers: It may be February, Kung Pow, but the Chinese New Year falls at different times each year, not always in January like how we celebrate here.
- Kung Pow: Oh, yeah. Right. Right. I knew that. Yup.
- Principal Pincers: This year, to celebrate, I've decided the school will have a Dragon Kite Contest.
- Kung Pow: A Dragon Kite Contest?
- Principal Pincers: Yes, each person or team will build their own Dragon Kite. The kite that stays up in the air the longest wins this prize: a huge box of Yum Dung Clusters!
- Tiger Moth: Wow! Great prize.
- Principal Pincers: Good luck everyone.
- Tiger Moth:
(to himself) The contest sounds simple enough, but even a nice kite contest may tempt evil to become involved. I better keep an eye out.
- Narrator: Later that day at lunch, Tiger runs into the Fruit Fly Boys.

- Fruit Fly #1: Hey, Tiger Sloth.
- Fruit Fly #2: Heh, heh, Tiger Sloth.
- Fruit Fly #1: Are you going to try to enter the Dragon Kite Contest?
- Tiger Moth: Sorry guys, I am a fighter, not a kiter.
- Fruit Fly #1: That is a good thing, because we are going to win!
- Narrator: Tiger and Kung Pow go sit down for lunch.
- Tiger Moth: I'm not surprised that those two would be after the prize. I wonder what they are up to. They always seem to be attracted to trouble.
- Kung Pow: Yeah, like a moth to a flame.
- Tiger Moth: You know, I have never really liked that phrase, but you're right, Kung. They do always seem to breed trouble.
- Narrator: The Dragon Kite contest is a week later. On New Year's Day, Chinese New Year's Day, that is, kites are flying high and the contest is in full swing.
- Tiger Moth: Something doesn't seem quite right. I just can't seem to put my feelers on it. Hmm, there is only one Fruit Fly and he is looking way too happy.
- Tiger Moth: Hey, Fruit Loop, what's up?
- Fruit Fly #2: My kite is up there tearing everyone else's kites to pieces! Ha, ha!
- Tiger Moth: What's the deal?
- Fruit Fly #2: How do you like it? It's a fighting kite!
- Tiger Moth: It's ripping through all of the other kites like they were rice paper!
- Kung Pow: That has got to be against the rules.

- Fruit Fly #2: Would I break the rules?
- Tiger Moth: That is not a hard question to answer.
- Principal Pincers: (approaches) I am afraid that he is right, Tiger. There is nothing in the rules about fighting kites. Oh dear, there goes another poor kite.
- Fruit Fly #2: This is great. This thing practically flies itself. I am such a great kite maker!
- Kung Pow: (as he and Tiger walk away) I don't buy that. This stinks worse than a dung beetle!
- Tiger Moth: You know, I have been thinking. Something is definitely smelly, because when I put two and two together, I get one missing Fruit Fly.
- Kung Pow: What's your plan?
- Tiger Moth: It is time for us to enter the Dragon Kite Contest.
- Kung Pow: But I thought you were, "a fighter, not a kiter."
- Tiger Moth: Well, actually, I am about to become a kite fighter.
- Narrator: Tiger begins to tie a kite to his waist.
- Tiger Moth: Hang on to your exoskeleton and grab the Tiger by the tail, Kung Pow. I am going to be the kite!
- Narrator: Can Tiger save the contest?
- Principal Pincers: Oh my, everyone's kites are being ruined.
- Narrator: What exactly are the Fruit Fly boys up to?
- Kung Pow: Something sure smells rotten.
- Narrator: Where is that other Fruit Fly?
